RESOURCES FOR BUILDING CREATIVITY INTO MENTORING PROGRAMS

Examples of Creativity-based Mentoring Programs

These programs can help you see the many possibilities of infusing creative activities into mentoring. Most of these are community-based, though some also work with youth in residential programs. Even if your program is not looking to develop a program immersed in the creative arts, there are many activities and approaches here that you can learn from.

Online and Print Resources for Creative Activities

Chill and Spill, a guided journal for teens, Magnificent, Marvelous Me for siblings of ill or special needs children, and Oodles of Doodles, an activity book based in art therapy for children who are hospitalized, are all published by Art With Heart. http://artwithheart.org/books/

Anti-Coloring Books, by Susan Striker, are fun and easy to use activity books for elementary school age children. The author's website describes each book and also has sample pages you can print and try out for free. http://www.susanstriker.com/anticoloring.html

The New Drawing on the Right Side of the Brain, by Betty Edwards. This second revised edition of this classic and widely used drawing instruction book is available through amazon.com, but be sure to visit the author's Web site for other useful resources. www.drawright.com/

Scribbles: A Really Giant Drawing and Coloring Book, by Artist Taro Gomi, is just one of her activity books for children of various age ranges. Other titles include: Doodles: A Really Giant Coloring and Doodling Book; Doodle All Year; and The Doodle Book: Draw! Colour! Create! All are available at major online and retail stores.

Mentoring Journal and Academic Activity Guide from Friends for Youth offer a wealth of projects and activities for mentors and mentees to do together. For details, go to: http://www.friendsforyouth.org/MIProducts.html. You can also preview these by checking them out of the MRC Mentoring Library. To access the library, go to http://www.edmentoring.org/lending_library.html and type in the name of the book you are seeking.

Resources for Arts Education Issues, Policy, Research, and Advocacy

The Arts Education Partnership provides information and communication about current and emerging arts education policies, issues, and activities at the national, state, and local levels. This is a good resource for grant writers and arts advocates in need of facts, research, or powerful messages about the benefits of the arts in education and youth development programs. www.aep-arts.org

Americans for the Arts is dedicated to representing and serving local communities and creating opportunities for every American to participate in and appreciate all forms of the arts. Its Web site includes information about recent news, advocacy efforts, partnerships, links to other organizations both local and national, and a bookstore. www.AmericansfortheArts.org
